

LOCAL WAR ON MOSQUITOES

DR. GEO. W. STAHLEY IN CHARGE
DR. GEORGE D. STAHLEY IN

Has Prepared a Series of Interesting
Articles—Boy Scouts to do Battle Against the Pest.

The Boy Scouts under direction of Dr. Charles H. Huber, propose to launch a warfare against the mosquito. Dr. George D. Stahley, Professor Emeritus of Biology and Hygiene at Gettysburg College is in charge of the propaganda campaign which will help in a wholesale slaughter of the mosquito. Dr. Stahley makes out a case against this enemy which is unanswerable. She is dangerous to health and life and should be slaughtered without quarter. The indictment of Dr. Stahley is as follows:

Many people have a well-grounded belief that all created things exist for some wise purpose. As for myself, I have always had an aversion to conundrums, and never cut a Gordian knot in my life, hence I confess an utter inability to answer the why of the mosquito. In temperate climates it is an exasperation, in tropical countries it is an unmitigated curse, and even in northern regions like Alaska and Lapland, mosquitoes menace health and commerce. A representative of the United States Geological Survey, on his return from Alaska said, "If I have to go up there next summer, what under the sun can I do from being bled to death by mosquitoes, they exist in countless millions, driving men to the verge of suicide and insanity."

With such an indictment against the activities of the adult mosquito, who would be so fool-hardy as to attempt a defense? Right in this community, respectable and law-abiding citizens as we are, hordes of mosquitoes have repeatedly made us the subjects of drive after drive—they have driven us off our front porches in the evening, they have driven us out of bed at night, and they have driven us to distraction in broad daylight. What more can be said in characterization of their fiendish propensity? I pause for a reply.

The food of the mosquito is an interesting as well as painful subject. The larvae, be it said to their great credit, feed on decaying matter in water, and hence act as useful scavengers. The adult mosquito, either male or female, can live on plant juices alone. Because of our personal experiences we are apt to think that they require the blood of warm-blooded animals to serve as their food, but we can readily give up this idea when we remember that there are great tracts of marshy lands in all countries into which warm-blooded animals never find their way, but in which mosquitoes are breeding in countless numbers.

I am now compelled to make a statement which I greatly hesitate to make—but all the research students engaged in investigating the history and habits of the mosquito agree in saying that it is only the female that draws blood, and that the male is exclusively vegetarian in his diet. The latter has a weaker piercing and sucking proboscis, which does not seem fitted to penetrate the skin of even a tender-skinned animal. Added to this blood-thirsty propensity of the female, the fact that it alone can sing—the male being voiceless—constitute a double reflection on the sex which I am loath to admit. To be a siren is bad enough, but to engage in warm-blooded murder is still worse.

It is common for us to speak of the poison of mosquito bites, and it has been proved by modern investigators that there is a poison gland in the head of the mosquito—indeed there are two sets of glands, each set consisting of three glands, two of which are ordinary salivary glands, and the third (between the two) having a different appearance and structure and secreting the poison. As is well known some people are not annoyed by mosquitoes, others are considerably so, whilst others are greatly distressed by the poison conveyed—indeed I have seen cases of swelling and redness simulating erysipelas following a mosquito bite.

The two mosquitoes, previously referred to, which convey special diseases to man, are the malarial mosquito and the yellow fever mosquito—the former belonging to the genus Anopheles and the latter to the genus Stegomyia. The experiments and investigations made in detecting, and confirming the truth of the above conclusions, are interesting and convincing, but the story is too long to be here recorded.

As for yellow fever, the mosquito, which conveys this germ, is not a native of this latitude, and hence need not be feared in Gettysburg. But the malarial mosquito, the Anopheles, is a sojourner in our midst, and the occasional cases of malaria in Gettysburg and vicinity testify to this fact.

It has been known for about twenty-five years that this mosquito conveys the malarial germ from a patient sick with malaria to a well person, thus transferring the disease. There may be persons in Gettysburg who doubt this theory, but that has nothing to do with the demonstrated fact. Malaria is not infectious in the sense that it can be conveyed from person to person direct. The germ requires an "intermediate host" during which time to pass through certain necessary stages of its development, before it can be successfully inoculated into a well person. The malarial mosquito is very insidious in its approach. Its attacks are made at night. Its song has a very low pitch and it bites immediately on landing, so that a sleeping person may not become aware that he has been stung, and hence is loath to believe that his attack of malaria was acquired in that way.

In closing this brief sketch I make bold to declaim against all mosquitoes, whatever their lineage, as not only annoying and exasperating, but often dangerous to health and life. In my next I will speak of breeding places.

HOW MUCH FRUIT IS FROZEN?

TALK FEST AT FRUIT GROWERS HALL OVER PROBLEM.

Opinion Prevails that a Total Loss Will Not Follow, but a Small Crop.

The one absorbing question to all fruit growers is whether the freezes of March 29 and 30 and later have killed all the fruit buds. Every fruit grower has his own idea about the matter, and last Saturday there was a talk-fest at Fruit Growers' Hall at which answers to the question were volunteered. Paul Hoffman, Farm Bureau agent presided and talks were first given by experts in horticulture. R. D. Anthony, of the State College Department of Horticulture, S. W. Frost, of the State College Research Laboratory, and R. C. Walton, entomologist at State College Research Laboratory at Arendtsville, and the situation was not a hopeless one as presented by these experts, rather there would be a small crop and of course accompanied by higher prices than there be with a big crop.

Experts have been through the orchards of Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland and Southern Pennsylvania. In some sections 25 per cent of peach buds were found good and from ten to 80 per cent of the apple buds were good, dependent upon the variety and whether the trees were on the tops of hills or lower levels has made a large difference in favor of the latter, frequently to the extent of sixty per cent and over.

In answer to the question whether the buds were going to stick, Prof. Anthony stated that the buds would stick on good vigorous wood rather than on poor wood, and gave the following valuable advice: "Do not forget that we are growing next year's crop this year. Care taken between now and July 1 will tell next year. Fruit buds for next year are formed between June 1 and July 15. If good fruit buds are formed a good crop may be expected next year. Trees in sod should have five pounds of nitrate of soda immediately to increase vigor. Trees will respond and pay for the expense. If we try to save money this year on spraying and fertilization the trees will not yield good crops next year."

R. C. Walton declared that he had found orchards around Arendtsville with 25 per cent good buds, 44 per cent, 53 per cent and 48 per cent.

A number of local growers expressed their views of the situation. W. S. Adams was of the opinion he had 20 per cent good buds on Belle of Georgia and Carmen peaches, other varieties almost a total loss, and big loss on apples. J. W. Prickett said he had 50 per cent good buds. J. L. Butt, Chas. Raffensperger and C. J. Tyson noted the destruction of buds on trees in high altitude and the more hopeful prospects on trees in lower levels.

Altogether the conclusion is a fair one that 1921 is not likely to be an entirely fruitless year.

CONGRESS HAS CONVENED

PRESIDENT HARDING READS MESSAGE TO CONGRESS.

Wise Course is to Engage Under the Existing Treaty—Which Means the Woodrow Wilson Treaty.

President Harding followed the example of President Wilson of presenting his first message to Congress on Tuesday. This method followed by George Washington and John Adams had been omitted until re-established by Woodrow Wilson as a good Democratic way of doing things.

President Harding did not follow the example of President Wilson in either brevity or clearness of statement. The message is twice as long as the usual Wilson message, and when the League of Nations is declared dead in one breath and in the next one it is said "the wise course would seem to be the acceptance of the confirmation of our rights and interest as already provided and to engage under the existing treaty," the reader can not help realize that he is in the realm of political legedmain, from which there will be an awakening when the Republican Party is going to learn the lesson of which Father Abraham administered, that you can't fool all the people all of the time.

The next follow up movement is a Revised Knox Resolution presented on Wednesday, repealing the Act of 1917 declaring this country to be at war with Germany, provided however, we get all the rights, claims and demands coming to us under the treaty which we refuse to sign and recognize. Some more political slight of hand performance. A conclusion based on justice and right seems far in a distance. The exact text of the Revised Resolution is as follows:

"That the Joint Resolution of Congress passed April 6, 1917, declaring a state of war to exist between the Imperial German Government and the Government and People of the United States, and making provisions to prosecute the same, be, and the same is hereby, repealed, and said state of war is hereby declared at an end.

"Provided, however, that all property of the Imperial German Government, or its successor or successors, and all of the German nationals which was, on April 6, 1917, in or has since that date come into the possession or under the control of the Government of the United States or any of its officers, agents, or employees, from any source or by any agency whatsoever, shall be retained by the United States and no disposition thereof made, except as shall have been heretofore, or specifically hereafter provided by Congress, until such time as the German Government has by a treaty with the United States, ratification whereof is to be made by and with the advice and consent of the Senate, made suitable provisions for the satisfaction of all claims against the German Government of all persons, whosoever domiciled, who owe permanent allegiance to the United States and who have suffered, through the acts of the German Government or its agents since July 31, 1914, loss, damage, or injury to their persons or property, directly or indirectly, whether through the ownership of shares of stock in German, American, or other corporations, or in consequence of hostilities or of any operations of war, or otherwise, and also provisions granting to persons owing permanent allegiance to the United States, most favored nation treatment, whether the same is national or otherwise, in all matters affecting residence, business, profession, trade, navigation, commerce and industrial property rights, and confirming to the United States all fines, forfeitures, penalties and seizures imposed or made by the United States during the war, whether in respect to the property of the German Government or German nationals, and waiving any and all pecuniary claims based on events which occurred at any time before the coming into force of such treaty, any existing treaty between the United States and Germany to the contrary notwithstanding.

"Section 2. That until by treaty or act or joint resolution of Congress it shall be determined otherwise, the United States, although it has not ratified the Treaty of Versailles, reserves all the rights, powers, claims, privileges, indemnities, reparations or advantages to which its nationals have become entitled, including the right to enforce the same under the terms of the armistice signed November 11, 1918, or any extensions or modifications thereof or which under the Treaty of Versailles have been stipulated for its benefit or to which it is entitled as one of the principal Allied and Associated Powers.

"Section 3. That the joint resolution of Congress approved December 7, 1917, 'declaring that a state of war exists between the Imperial and Royal Austro-Hungarian Government and the Government and the People of the United States and making provisions to prosecute the same,' be, and the same is hereby repealed, and said state of war is hereby declared at an end."

—Adams County Buys More Seals.

Sale of tuberculosis Christmas seals last December in Pennsylvania, exclusive of Pittsburgh and Allegheny county, totaled $283,451.73. This compares with $296,146.36 in the 1919 sale.

Thirty-eight counties increased their 1920 sales over 1919 and twenty-eight show a decrease. Adams county was in the former list showing $351.62 in 1919 and $480.85 in 1920. An average of approximately 80 per cent of the money realized from the seal sale by county tuberculosis organizations, affiliated with the Pennsylvania Tuberculosis Society, was retained by them for work in their territory.

The seals sold mean less than four cents apiece from each person in the State.

Forest Protection Week.

Governor Sproul authorized the observance of forest protection week from April 17 to 23. During that week every citizen of the Commonwealth will consider the forests, the benefits, not to be secured from any other source, which they confer, the reasons why they should be protected and perpetuated, and especially how forest fires may be prevented. The forest fire question is too serious to be set lightly aside.
